I am Anthony Brodie. April Leggo is my fiancée.

I am reporting this as a serious coordinated Discord abuse and platform-reliability incident, not ordinary spam.

My Legion Discord server was targeted by an account impersonating me and April Leggo using the name "Anthony Brodie 🍷 April Leggo". The account posted 26 messages made from extreme repeated bracket/markdown/link-mask characters. The deleted-message log shows Discord user ID 461963351707222035 and timestamp UK: 2026-06-12 14:21:46 / AU: 2026-06-12 23:21:46 for one captured payload.

The payload was not normal text spam. It appears designed to abuse Discord markdown/link parsing and client rendering. The visible payload is huge runs of bracket characters, including repeated [and] sequences, consistent with a markdown/link-mask lag/crash attempt.

They spam this:

[illegible]

The spam was manually deleted, but the server impact did not end when the messages were deleted. More than 24 hours later, people are still reporting Discord lagging/crashing in the server when they click/change rooms. This is now affecting ordinary server use and support access for my community/customers.

Important clarification before this is closed as a basic moderation issue:

- Normal users cannot see my private deleted-message log channels.
- The public spam itself was deleted.
- The issue is that Discord clients/server state are still lagging after the payload was deleted.

I need Discord Trust & Safety / Engineering to treat this as a suspected Discord client/server denial-of-service bug or abuse vector. If deleted markdown/bracket/link-mask payloads can keep causing lag through cache, render state, search/indexing, embed parsing, mobile parsing, message references, deleted-message state, or any other retained object, that needs Discord-side investigation and cleanup.

7. Review/platform abuse and false-review pattern

These files show the wider pattern of false reports/reviews and platform handling issues. I am including them only as background context for coordinated abuse, not asking Discord to resolve Trustpilot issues:

- <https://they-wish-i.died.space/harrassment/2024-08-13-dzmt-kyle-flagged-with-proof.jpg>

Excerpt: False DayZ Multi Tool review alleging the bot wiped a server/channels/roles; evidence says this was false or unsupported.

Excerpt: Repeat Google takedown demand requesting human-reviewed decision and preservation answers.

The current issue I need help with is the 26 bracket/markdown spam messages were manually deleted, but users are still reporting lag/crashes more than 24 hours later when clicking or changing rooms. Can discord clear any server-side cached/rendered/indexed state, deleted-message state, markdown parsing state, search indexing, embed/link parsing, message-reference data, channel state, or other retained object tied to the deleted payloads?

or if it's something I can do, please provide the exact admin-side steps required to stop the lag for affected users and channels beyond simply deleting the spam messages, because deleting the spam messages has already been done.
